UA 170/08 Fear for safety/Death threats

HONDURAS Santos Feliciano Aguilar Álvares (m), member of the Garífuna community of San Juan
Other members and leaders of the Garífuna community

Santos Feliciano Aguilar Álvares was abducted, beaten and threatened with death on 5 June by up to 10 men, allegedly private security guards working for a local real estate company in San Juan. Santos Feliciano Aguilar Álvares is a member of the Afro-descendant Garífuna community of San Juan, Atlántida department, northern Honduras. A few hours before the incident, he had taken part in a community assembly attended by representatives of the local real estate company who he accused of pressurizing Garífuna people to sell their land.

At around 9.30pm on 5 June the unknown men surrounded Santos Feliciano Aguilar Álvares as he walked down a street in the outskirts of the San Juan village whilst on his way to carry out an errand. The group of men abducted Santos Aguilar and took him to premises owned by the real estate company and beat him. Whilst being held against his will, they accused Santos Aguilar of being “a spy for the leaders of Nuevo San Juan” (oreja de los directivos del Nuevo San Juan). The men intimidated Santos Aguilar by saying to each other “let’s kill him and bury him right here” (matémoslo y enterrémoslo aquí mismo).

Santos Feliciano Aguilar Álvares was released shortly after the beating and the injuries he sustained required hospital treatment. Amnesty International believes that his safety and that of other members of the Garífuna community is at risk.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

Indigenous groups in Honduras, including the Afro-descendant Garífuna communities, have struggled for more than a decade to assert their right to the land they have inhabited for generations. Their land is coveted by companies seeking to build tourist resorts that would displace the Garífuna people.

Members of the community have suffered threats and acts of intimidation linked to their struggle to protect their land rights. In March and June 2006 Jessica García, one of the Garífuna leaders, was harassed and threatened at gun point to sign over land belonging to the community (UA 219/06, AMR 37/005/2006). In November 2005 an arson attack destroyed the property of Wilfredo Guerrero, another of the Garífuna leaders. Three young members of the same community were killed in 2006. Police officers have been charged in connection with these killings.
