

URGENT ACTION

TURKISH MEDICAL ASSOCIATION LEADERS DETAINED
On 30 January police detained 11 members of the Turkish Medical Association's Central Council as part of a criminal investigation launched following the association's statement calling for an end to Turkey's military operation in Afrin, northern Syria. They must be released immediately and unconditionally.

In the morning of 30 January, police raided the head office of the Turkish Medical Association (TTB) and the homes of the association's chair Raşit Tükel and 10 doctors who are members of its Central Council in Ankara, the capital, and seven other provinces. The police detained them as part of an investigation for 'making propaganda for a terrorist organization' and 'inciting the public to hatred or hostility'. The investigation began following a criminal complaint by the Ministry of Interior and government spokespeople condemning the TTB for their statement on 24 January, entitled 'war is a public health issue'.

According to the TTB's lawyer who spoke to Amnesty International, the prosecutor in charge of the investigation is expected to bring members of the Central Council detained outside the city to Ankara for questioning. The association's lawyers are lodging an appeal against the decision to detain the doctors.

Following its statement regarding the military operation in Afrin, northern Syria, the TTB received many threats by phone, email and on social media. On 26 January, the association made a formal request for protection from the Ankara governorship. As of 30 January, the requested protection had not been granted.

The TTB's statement calling for an end to Turkey's military operation is protected under the right to freedom of expression and that its members must not be prosecuted for having exercised this right, enshrined in international human rights law and in the Turkish Constitution.

Please write immediately in Turkish, English or your own language:

- Calling on the authorities to ensure the immediate and unconditional release of Raşit Tükel and 10 members of the Central Council of the Turkish Medical Association;
- Urging the Minister of Interior and the Governor of Ankara to provide immediate protection for TTB's members and offices, as requested by the organization;
- Calling on the Minister of Interior to ensure that a prompt, thorough, impartial and independent investigation is carried out into the threats of violence received by the TTB.
