MOHAMMED MOHAMMED HASSAN ODAINI

YEMENI NATIONAL

'For all he knows, he could be there for the rest of his life.'

Mohammed Odaini's lawyer

Mohammed Mohammed Hassan Odaini has been deemed eligible for release from Guantánamo. The Yemeni authorities say he can return home safely. He has not been interrogated for two years. Yet he is still in Guantánamo.

Mohammed Odaini, aged 24 and from Ta'iz in Yemen, has said that he went to Pakistan in 2000 to study Islamic law at Salafi University in Faisalabad. In March 2002 Pakistani police raided a house where he was dining with 14 other Yemeni nationals. All 15 were handed over to US authorities and later transferred to Guantánamo. Mohammed Odaini was cleared for transfer in June 2006. The reason for his continued detention is unclear.

ACT NOW

- Express concern that around 100 Yemeni nationals remain in Guantánamo after years of incarceration, even though not one has been charged with a crime.
- Ask why Mohammed Mohammed Hassan Odaini and other Yemeni nationals cleared for release have not been returned to Yemen.
