The above were arrested and charged with participating in the assassination of the Speaker of the People's Assembly, Dr Rifa'at al-Mahgoub, and five guards in Cairo on 12 October. Following the assassination mass arrests took place, initially focussing on Arab nationals, and then among Egyptian members and sympathizers of Islamic groups throughout the country. The total number of those arrested is not known.

Amnesty International has received reports that the above ten are among many who have been subjected to torture to make them confess to having been involved in the crime. They are believed to be held by the State Security Intelligence Police (SSIP) at its directorate in Lazoghly, Cairo. Defence lawyers who were allowed to attend two sessions of their interrogation before the State Security Procuracy have been banned from attending subsequent sessions and have been denied access to their clients at their place of detention. One of the accused, Mamdouh 'Ali Youssef, was reported to have suffered a spinal injury as a result of torture and was brought to his interrogation sessions on a stretcher, unable to move.

Information received by Amnesty International indicates that the State Security Procuracy has registered the physical marks of torture apparent on the bodies of the ten men named above, but there are fears that the torture may be continuing as long as they remain held by the SSIP in incommunicado detention.

The torture of political detainees held under emergency legislation is a long-standing concern. Detainees are held in incommunicado detention, without access to lawyers, relatives or medical doctors. In a report issued on 17 October Amnesty International urged the Egyptian Government to respect its obligations under national and international law, to investigate all allegations of torture and bring to justice those responsible. The organization also called for immediate measures to be taken to safeguard detainees from torture or ill-treatment.

RECOMMENDED ACTION: Telegrams/telexes/faxes/express and airmail letters:

- expressing concern at the reported torture of the ten men named above;
- urging that they be moved immediately to a recognized place of detention and that they be given prompt and frequent access to lawyers and family members;

- urging that they be given immediate medical treatment, as required, and that they be examined by a forensic medical doctor without delay;

- urging that immediate measures be taken to put an end to torture, and to investigate promptly and thoroughly the alleged torture of these ten prisoners, in accordance with the UN Convention against Torture, which Egypt has ratified.
