UA 104/07 Fear of torture or ill-treatment/Medical concern

IRAN Hasan Hikmet Demir, or Hassan Hekmat Damir (m), also known as Agit, Turkish national

Kurdish opposition party member Hasan Hikmet Demir, also known as Agit, reportedly escaped in April from the prison where he had been detained for over a year. He was recaptured and is now reportedly in solitary confinement in a Ministry of Intelligence detention facility in Orumieh, in the north-western province of Western Azerbaijan, where he is at risk of torture and ill-treatment.

It was cold and snowing when he was captured, in the mountainous region on the Iranian border with Turkey. He was suffering frostbite in his feet, and the doctors who treated him reportedly suggested he should have both his feet amputated, which he refused. Amnesty International is concerned that Hasan Hikmet Demir may not be afforded adequate medical treatment.

After he was caught he was first taken back to Orumieh prison, where he had been detained, and then reportedly moved to a Ministry of Intelligence detention facility in Orumieh, under the pretext of taking him to hospital for treatment. He is reportedly being interrogated and subjected to severe mental and physical pressure.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

Kurds are believed to make up between seven and 10 percent of the population of Iran. They live mainly in the north-western provinces neighbouring Iraq and Turkey. For many years, Kurdish organizations such as the Kurdistan Democratic Party of Iran and Komala engaged in armed resistance to the government, but more recently they have abandoned armed struggle for independence in favour of the peaceful pursuit of regional autonomy within a federal system of government. The more recently formed PJAK, the Iranian wing of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) armed opposition group, is now fighting the Iranian authorities in border areas close to Iraq.
