Death Penalty

11 February 1998

JORDANNadi 'Ali, 32
Mabruk Mire', 28

Nadi 'Ali and Mabruk Mire', both Egyptian nationals, were sentenced to death by a Jordanian criminal court on 5 February 1998 after being found guilty of robbery and the murder of Subhi Dakhel, also an Egyptian national, on 2 May 1997.

The death sentence must be ratified by the Court of Cassation and King Hussein bin Talal before it can be carried out.

Amnesty International does not condone violent crime and recognizes the role of governments in bringing perpetrators of such crimes to justice. However, the organization considers the death penalty to be the ultimate cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment and a violation of the right to life, as enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and is therefore unconditionally opposed to its use.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

At least 17 people were sentenced to death and 11 people were executed in Jordan in 1997. Others who were sentenced to death are awaiting hearings before the Court of Cassation.

RECOMMENDED ACTION: Please send telegrams/faxes/express/airmail letters in Arabic, English or your own language:

- expressing sympathy for the victims of violent crimes and their families and acknowledging the role of governments in bringing the perpetrators of such crimes to justice;
- expressing unconditional opposition to the death penalty, which has never been shown to have a unique deterrent effect and which is brutalizing to all involved in its application;
- urging King Hussein bin Talal to commute the death sentence imposed upon Nadi 'Ali and Mabruk Mire' on 5 February 1998 to a more humane form of punishment;
- urging that no more executions be carried out in Jordan and that the government work towards abolishing the death penalty by the 50th Anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1998.
