Title: Peru: Legislation is not enough: Torture must be abolished in practice

Abstract: In February 1998 Peru passed legislation which criminalized torture as a crime in itself. However, since that time Amnesty International has received victims' testimonies that torture continues to be widespread in Peru. This document looks at the legislation which has undermined safeguards against torture during detention and examines the culture of impunity which is still in evidence in Peru. The appendix contains details of several cases of torture, in some cases leading to the death of the victim.

Abstract: This document looks at the treatment of asylum-seekers in the USA. It examines the recent history of immigration and refugee legislation that leads to detention and the violation of the asylum-seekers' fundamental human rights. Presenting case studies where appropriate, the report looks at the problems caused by lack of information for those detained, the conditions of detention and the particular problems faced by women detainees. It concludes with a demonstration of how the USA is failing to meet international standards by continuing to treat asylum-seekers as criminals

Title: USA: Race, rights and police brutality

Abstract: In 1998 Amnesty International launched a campaign on human rights violations in the USA which included among its central themes the pattern of human rights abuses perpetrated by police in the USA. This document describes proposals for change made at federal and local level and other developments which have taken place since the publication of the initial report (USA Rights for All AMR 51/35/99). It also summarizes Amnesty International's continuing concerns about police brutality in the USA, specifically highlighting police shootings, restraint techniques and evidence that racial and ethnic minorities were disproportionately the victims of such abuses.

Title: USA (California): Update on police brutality

Abstract: In the past year, Amnesty International has raised concerns with California law enforcement authorities across the state about deaths in custody; questionable shootings; the use of OC pepper spray; electro-shock belts and other issues. While the Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD) and the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department (LASD) have instituted significant reforms over the past few years, problems remain, and there are reports of excessive force in many other California police departments which have not been subject to the same levels of ongoing scrutiny. This report provides a summary of these key concerns.

Title: Pakistan: Honour killings of women and girls

Abstract: This report describes the different facets of the phenomenon of honour killings in Pakistan. It looks at the traditions that form the framework of such killings, particularly the commodification of women and the notion of honour. Honour killings may happen for a variety of reasons, including seeking a divorce, rape or choosing a marriage partner. The report highlights the failure of the authorities to prevent these killings by investigating and punishing the perpetrators. Both police and judges display gender bias in favour of men who have killed women or girls for alleged breaches of honour.

Title: Socialist Republic of Viet Nam: Appeals against the death penalty

Abstract: The death penalty in Viet Nam is an optional punishment for 44 offenses. Although legislators there have recently discussed reducing this number, death sentences continue to be handed down regularly. According to cases reported in the official media, around 46 people have been sentenced to death and seven people have been executed. As the authorities do not make public full statistics, the actual numbers are believed to higher. There is also concern about the fairness of some trials. This document includes appeals for Tran Dam and Phung Long That, sentenced to death on 29 April 1999 for smuggling; and in another case, Tang Minh Phung, Lien Khiu Thin, Pham Nhat Hong, Nguyen Ngoc Bich, Nguyen Tan Phuc and Nguyen Xuan Phong, who were sentenced to death on 4 August for fraud and corruption.

Abstract: Amnesty International has learned that the Belarusian human rights lawyer, Vera Stremkovskaya, has come under increasing pressure to cease her human rights activities. In the past year three different criminal cases have been brought against her, all formulated on the basis that she had defamed public officials. Although only one charge remains, there is concern that if convicted and imprisoned she could face up to five years in prison. Amnesty International would consider her a prisoner of conscience if imprisoned and is calling for the charges against her to be dropped.

Abstract: This document updates the situation of conscientious objectors in Armenia. It gives details of specific cases of young men who have been imprisoned and beaten for refusing to take part in military service, particularly on the grounds of religious beliefs for Jehovah's Witnesses. In some cases members of the young men's families have been detained illegally as hostages to force them to appear at the conscription office. The report concludes with an examination of the international reaction to the situation in Armenia and a comparison to the treatment of conscientious objectors in Azerbaijan and Georgia.

Abstract: There is concern for the safety of the declining Croatian Serb population in some villages in eastern Slavonia after reports within the past four months of two killings of local Serbs and dozens of other violent incidents reported in the Vukovar area. On 9 August Djuro Mutic, a 39-year-old Serb, was beaten to death in the village of Berak, and on 16 May 59-year-old Teodor Bogdanovic was reportedly shot and killed by a Croat from Kosovo. Despite police investigations and subsequent arrests, there is concern that local and national authorities have not acted decisively to prevent the violence from escalating.
