MEDICAL CONCERN

@Muhammad al-Fasi
£SAUDI ARABIA

Amnesty International is seriously concerned for the well-being of Muhammad al-Fasi, a Saudi Arabian businessman who was arrested during a visit to Jordan on 2 October 1991 and subsequently extradited to Saudi Arabia. He is said to have been detained because of his public criticism of the Saudi Arabian Government during the Gulf War. He is being held in a secret location in the capital, Riyadh and there are reports that he has been subjected to torture and ill-treatment.

Background

During the Gulf crisis, Muhammad al-Fasi publicly criticized the Saudi Arabian Government. He broadcast his views from a radio station transmitting from Baghdad, the "Voice of the People of Najd and Hijaz". He also issued press releases and made public statements critical of the Saudi Arabian Government. In the aftermath of the Gulf war, he set up a fund to send humanitarian aid to Iraq.

Muhammad al-Fasi is related to the ruling al-Saud family through the marriage of one of his sisters to Prince Turki bin 'Abd al-'Aziz, brother of King Fadh bin 'Abd al-'Aziz. The Saudi Arabian Government, however, apparently sought his arrest because of his criticisms of the government. Muhammad al-Fasi is aged 38, married with seven children, and was in Jordan with his family when arrested by Jordanian security forces at the Intercontinental Hotel in Amman. Following his arrest, Jordanian officials acknowledged in the press that he had been handed over to Saudi authorities. The Saudi Arabian embassy in Jordan, however, denied knowledge of his extradition.

Reports were subsequently received that Muhammad al-Fasi was detained at a secret location in Riyadh. Amnesty International appealed to the Saudi Arabian Government for information on his whereabouts, fearing that he was at risk of torture. He is since reported to have been tortured and ill-treated. Unconfirmed reports state that he has been subjected to beatings all over his body, shackled and blindfolded for prolonged periods and subjected to falaqa (beating on the soles of the feet). He is said to have sustained a fracture to one of his hands and it is believed that he may be without medical attention. It is further reported that he has been forced to sign confessions and to read these confessions in front of a video camera. While Amnesty International cannot at this stage confirm these allegations, the details are consistent with reports of the torture of other political detainees in Saudi Arabia which remains a common practice.

Amnesty International is gravely concerned for Muhammad al-Fasi's safety while he continues to be held in secret detention. There has been no response from the Saudi Arabian Government to calls for information on his whereabouts and it is feared that his torture and ill-treatment will continue.

Amnesty International is again appealing urgently to the Saudi Arabian Government to disclose information on his whereabouts, guarantee his safety and make known the reasons for his detention and any charges which are to be brought against him.
