

URGENT ACTION

FATHER AND DAUGHTER BEATEN BY POLICE

Daniel Antonio Núñez and his daughter Francis Daniela Núñez Martínez were beaten and threatened by police officers in Caracas, the capital of Venezuela, on 30 January. There are concerns for their safety and that of their family.

Daniel Antonio Núñez and his 16 year-old daughter Francis Daniela Núñez Martínez were beaten and threatened by seven police officers from the Caracas Investigative Police. The police had called them to testify as witnesses in relation to a shooting near their home, in Caracas, a day before, where a woman was killed.

According to their testimonies, at the police station they were taken to separate rooms. Daniel Núñez was handcuffed and questioned by four police officers about the shooting, but when he said he could not provide any evidence as he was inside his house at the time, the officers beat him and used a bag to suffocate him. They reportedly said: "you better talk..you are going to end up in trouble..you want to see how I bring your daughter and fuck her in front of you".

At the same time, Francis Daniela Núñez Martínez was also being questioned by three police officers without the presence of an adult or a member of the public prosecutor's office. She was asked to identify a neighbour who the police suspected had been responsible for the shooting. She was reportedly tied up with a belt and slapped on the face. When she said she had not seen anything, she was told: "So, what do we have to do for you to help us ... Are we going to have to plant some drug on you? I am going to smash your face in".

They were both allowed to return home, but their lawyers fear for their safety as the police have indicated that they may be asked again to identify the alleged perpetrator. The lawyers also fear possible reprisals from the police after the family reported the ill-treatment and threats they received to the public prosecutor's office on 3 February.
