The seven individuals named above were arrested by members of the National Intelligence Agency (NIA) on 15 June. They are being held incommunicado detention at the NIA headquarters in the capital Banjul. They were arrested for the peaceful expression of their beliefs and Amnesty International fears for their safety.

Emil Touray, Pa Modou Faal and Sarata Jabbi-Dibba, who has a 6 month old baby, were arrested at the offices of the Gambia Press Union at approximately midday on the 15 June. Sam Sarr of the Editor of Foroyaa was arrested at his house in Serrekunda at approximately 5 pm. A little while later Abubcarr Saidy Khan was also arrested along with Pap Saine from offices of The Point newspaper.

Their arrests follow the publication in The Point and Foroyaa newspapers of a press release issued on the 11 June by the Gambian Press Union. The press release criticised the way that the President of the Gambia spoke about fellow journalist Deydra Hydera, a former press union president and editor of the Point newspaper who was murdered in 2004. The press release also reminded the government that since Deydra Hydera's murder there has been no serious investigation into whom was responsible and no one has been brought to justice.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

Journalists and members of the media are under serious threat in Gambia. Since 1994 almost 30 journalists have had to leave the country. More than half of them have had to leave in the last two years alone. Journalists have been subjected to an array of human rights abuses including unlawful arrest and detention, torture, enforced disappearance, and unlawful killing.

Gambians should be able to freely express their views as provided for under Section 207 of the 1997 Gambian Constitution and various regional and international treaties, including the African Charter on Human and Peoples Rights and the International Covenant on Political and Civil Rights (ICCPR) to which Gambia is a party.
