Prisoners

Japan. Japan enacted legislation yesterday replacing a nearly century-old prison law in an effort to improve inmate treatment, often criticised by human rights groups as brutal reports Reuters. See: http://www.stuff.co.nz/stuff/0,2106,3284845a12,00.html

Uganda. A census done in August 2003 showed that there were 17,523 inmates in Uganda, even though prisons should only have been accommodating 8,563. The number of inmates is expected to reach 20,000 by July this year, reports AllAfrica.com.
http://allafrica.com/stories/200505190001.html

USA. Issuing an order as part of the regular monitoring process of a previous lawsuit concerning state prison conditions, a federal district court judge said that California's prison health care system is failing, allowing inmates to die through malfeasance and is in "such a blatant state of crisis" that he may soon appoint a receiver and hold corrections officials in contempt. San Francisco Chronicle, 11 May
