

URGENT ACTION

SAFETY CONCERN FOR MISSING TEEN WITH ALBINISM

A 15 year old boy with albinism from Nambirikira Village, Traditional Authority Kachere, Dedza district went missing on 24 April. The police and community are searching for him.

David Fletcher, a 15 year old boy with albinism, had gone to watch a football match in the village on 24 April when he went missing. His whereabouts are still unknown. The police are searching for him.

The decomposing body of a 21 year old woman with albinism, Enelesi Nkhata, was found in a shallow grave by farmers at Mpale Estate on 14 April. Both arms and legs were cut off and she had a stab wound to the chest. Enelesi was staying with her grandmother in Kumtumba Village in Dedza district under Traditional Authority Kaphula. She was tricked by her relative into believing that he had found her a job in Madisi, Dowa. Enelesi went missing a few days before 14 April. Neighbors who had not seen her for days reported the matter to the police. At least 10 men, including some businessmen, were arrested on suspicion of involvement in the killing of Enelesi. Gerald Phiri, the relative, pleaded guilty to charges of "conspiracy to commit a felony" and "abduction in order to murder" under Sections 404 and 261 of the Penal Code; and was sentenced to 5 and 12 years imprisonment for each charge respectively.

A skull and clothes belonging to two year-old Whitney Chilumpha were discovered on 13 April in Balantha hill after unknown persons took her from her home. Two suspects have been arrested, her father is among them.

Thousands of people with albinism live in constant fear of being abducted or killed in Malawi, where their body parts are being sold for use in ritual purposes. At least 12 people with albinism are known to have been killed in Malawi since December 2014, while five others have been abducted during the same period and have not been found. At least 69 other crimes against people with albinism, including attempted abductions and opening up of graves in search of bones of people with albinism, have been reported between December 2014 and April 2016.

Please write immediately in English or your own language:

- Calling for a prompt, thorough and transparent investigation into the whereabouts of David Fletcher;
- Calling for those suspected to be responsible for crimes against people with albinism including abductions and killings to be brought to justice through trials that meet international standards of fairness;
- Urging the authorities to provide effective protection for people with albinism and ensure their right to life and personal security, in accordance with Malawi's international human rights obligations and commitments;
- Expressing concern over the safety and security of people with albinism in Malawi following reports of killings, abductions and attempted abductions.

SAFETY CONCERN FOR MISSING TEEN WITH ALBINISM

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Albinism is a rare, non-contagious, genetically inherited condition present at birth. Both parents must carry the gene for it to be passed on, even if they do not have albinism themselves. The condition is found in both genders, regardless of ethnicity and in all countries of the world. Albinism results in a lack of pigmentation (melanin) in the hair, skin and eyes, causing vulnerability to the sun and bright light. As a result, almost all people with albinism are visually impaired and are prone to developing skin cancer. There is no cure for the absence of melanin.

The majority of people living with albinism in Malawi live in rural areas in extreme poverty. Erroneous beliefs and superstitions have put the safety and lives of people with albinism at risk, including from killings, abductions, and mutilations. Ritual killings of people with albinism are influenced by superstitions and myths that their bones or body parts can bring riches. This has been the main basis even in cases of abductions, attempted abductions and other forms of violence against people with albinism in Malawi. The few perpetrators who have been arrested in the past have either been acquitted or given light sentences. The government has failed to implement programmes to change societal attitudes about albinism and people with albinism continue to be at risk of attacks, while some children have been abducted and sold by family members.

Malawian President Arthur Peter Mutharika issued a statement on 19 March 2015 condemning attacks on people with albinism, and called on police to arrest perpetrators and provide protection to people at risk of attack. Although some arrests were made, concerns remain about the inadequacy of police investigations and some perpetrators getting sentences which were not in line with the severity of the crime.

A colleague last seen with David Fletcher, has also vanished and he cannot be reached on phone. The colleague does not have albinism. The police are searching for both him and David.

Unknown persons broke into the house where two year-old Whitney Chilumpha was sleeping with her mother in Chiziya village, Kasungu district and took the child. Mother and child went to bed on 3 April at 8pm, but upon waking up at 4am on 4 April the mother discovered the child was missing. She immediately alerted the neighbours who conducted a search but did not find the child. The case was reported to the police. Whitney's skull, some teeth and clothes were found on 13 April. Her mother confirmed that those were the clothes the girl had on the night she went missing.

A nine-year-old boy with albinism, Harry Mokoshoni, of Moto Village in Machinga district was abducted on the night of 26 February by a group of unidentified men who broke into his family's home. The men threatened his mother and injured her as they took the boy away. A head was discovered in a neighbouring village on 3 March. It was confirmed to have been that of Harry Mokoshini. Among those arrested are an uncle of the child and a man previously arrested and convicted in 2015 for possession of bones of a person with albinism and fined 20,000 Malawian Kwacha (about US$30).

Eunice Phiri, a 53 year old woman with albinism, was tricked by three men, including her brother, on 23 January to accompany them on a trip to Zambia. Eunice Phiri's body was found by a herdsman on 28 January with her arms chopped off in Kasungu National Park.

With attacks against people with albinism increasing, families have withdrawn children from schools for fear of attacks. Some people with albinism have moved to urban areas for safety.
