ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

South Sudanese Military Police entered the residence of Elias Waya Nyipuch in the Rock City neighbourhood of Juba on 26 June 2016 at 10am with a letter signed by the Chief of General Staff, Lt. General Paul Malong, ordering his arrest. The military police arrested Elias Waya Nyipuch and detained him in a cell at Giyada military barracks in Juba, where he remained until his transfer to Bilpam Military Headquarters on 23 October 2016.

Elias Waya Nyipuch holds the rank of Lt. General in the South Sudan military. He fought with the Sudan People's Liberation Movement/Army (SPLM/A) during the Sudan civil war between 1983 and 2005. In 2012, he left active military service when he was transferred to the military's reserve list. Following the change in South Sudan's administrative boundaries to create 18 additional states, President Salva Kiir appointed Elias Waya Nyipuch as Governor of the newly formed Wau state, on 24 December 2015.

Between 24 and 26 June 2016, there was heavy fighting in Wau town, resulting in destruction of civilian property, murders, and the displacement of tens of thousands of people. A committee established by President Salva Kiir to investigate the fighting described in its report "total mistrust" between state security organs and Elias Waya Nyipuch, but did not identify him as having played a role in the violence.

Amnesty International has documented numerous cases of arbitrary detention and torture at both the Giyada and the Bilpam military barracks in Juba since the beginning of South Sudan's ongoing internal armed conflict in December 2013.
