

URGENT ACTION

DETAINEE INCOMMUNICADO

Venezuelan opposition member of parliament Gilber Caro has been in incommunicado detention since 26 April 2019, putting his personal integrity at risk. Authorities denied having information on his fate and whereabouts since his detention by intelligence officers until 31 May. Gilber Caro was also arbitrarily detained from January 2017 until June 2018 under unfounded accusations of treason and stealing military equipment. His disappearance and incommunicado detention is arbitrary since it reverses the freedom he was granted in June. We call on the Director of the intelligence service (SEBIN) to swiftly allow access to Gilber Caro and to release him immediately.

Mr. Gustavo González López

Director of the Bolivarian National Intelligence Service (SEBIN)
Servicio Bolivariano de Inteligencia Nacional
Torre Corporativa Metro de Caracas
Avenida Casanova, Plaza Venezuela
Caracas 1050, Venezuela

Dear Director,

I am alarmed by the incommunicado detention of member of parliament Gilber Caro since 26 April, after Bolivarian National Intelligence Service (SEBIN) officers took him in a restaurant in Caracas. Since the detention and later acknowledgement of his whereabouts, Gilber Caro's lawyers have been repeatedly denied access and communication with him. Incommunicado detention for prolonged period of time can amount to torture under human rights law. The SEBIN must allow access Gilber Caro's lawyers access to him, guarantee his personal integrity and release him immediately.

I express my dismay for such a concerning situation to happen in your country and, as the authority in charge of ensuring the integrity and rights of anyone under SEBIN custody, I call on you to immediately grant Gilber Caro access to his lawyers and family and proceed with his release.

Yours sincerely,

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

This week, the court finally told his lawyer that Gilber is inside the Caracas detention center “El Helicoide” but she is not allowed to see him.

Gilber Caro is a self-made activist for the rights of inmates, a political activist, and member of parliament for an opposition party.

On January 2017 he was detained by officers of the Bolivarian National Intelligence Service (SEBIN) while on his way to Caracas and was later charged with treason and stealing military weapons. Caro spent over a year in prison under those unfounded and politically motivated charges. He was conditionally released, however the court in charge of his case reversed this decision on 23 April 2019, although the decision was allegedly notified on 6 May 2019. The authorities still deny that he was arrested on 26 April, and his whereabouts and fate are still unknown.

Gilber Caro's previous arbitrary detention was documented by Amnesty International in its report Silenced by Force (see: www.amnesty.org/en/docuemnts/amr53/6014/2017/en/), and extensively campaigned for his and other 21 people's release.

An unprecedented human rights crisis in Venezuela has been deepening since 2014, with authorities responding to claims for change and respect of their human rights with extrajudicial killings, abusive use of force and arbitrary detentions of those who protest and dissent, including political leaders and, as in this case, members of parliament without fulfilling the requirements for lifting the constitutionally granted parliamentary immunity.
