Nestor Mbaïlo, Vincent Mbaïnaissem, Grégoire Boltoungar and Fleuri Neradingam have remained in detention without charge since their arrests in August and September 1996.

Following arrest, they were held in the gendarmerie station (brigade de gendarmerie) in Moundou, Logone Occidental, southern Chad. Although told by the local authorities that, as suspected members of an armed opposition group active in the area (the Forces armées pour la République fédérale (FARF), Armed Forces for a Federal Republic), they fell under the jurisdiction of the military authorities, the Procureur de la République of Logone Occidental intervened over the poor prison conditions in which they were held. Since his intervention, the men have been held in Moundou prison, where conditions, although still harsh, are better. Reports that they were tortured and ill-treated in the early stages of their detention are not believed to have been investigated.

According to information received by Amnesty International, they may be being held pending the outcome of negotiations between the government authorities and the FARF. Previous negotiations in similar circumstances have resulted in amnesties for members of armed groups.

Further information has been obtained on the cases of Emmanuel Mbaïadjim, Blaise Mbaïdoual, Apolinaire Mbaïodji and Raymond Mbaïlasse. The men have been accused of criminal offences, charged and tried by the Brigade Territoriale de Bénouye, Logone Occidental. Raymond Mbaïlasse was acquitted and released on 31 December 1996, while Emmanuel Mbaïadjim, Blaise Mbaïdoual and Apolinaire Mbaïodji received two-year prison sentences.

No further appeals are required on the cases of Emmanuel Mbaïadjim, Blaise Mbaïdoual, Apolinaire Mbaïodji and Raymond Mbaïlasse.

- seeking assurances that the physical integrity of the detainees is being safeguarded and that they have access to legal counsel, medical care and their families;
- asking whether reports that the men were subjected to torture and ill-treatment in the early stages of their detention have been investigated.
