INDIA188 Bhutanese people from refugee camps in eastern Nepal
new incident: 90 Bhutanese detainees beaten at Berhampur Central Jail

Amnesty International is concerned at reports that on 3 May 1996, approximately 90 Bhutanese people detained at Berhampur Central Jail, West Bengal, were beaten with lathis (weighted bamboo canes) by jail guards. At least 50 people were reported injured, 12 of them seriously. Two detainees had to be hospitalized; Ahok Bharati suffered a serious head injury and Durga Bahadur Chhetri a fractured leg.

The incident apparently happened when the detainees tried to lodge a complaint with the Jail Superintendent about the beating of two detainees the previous day. When the detainees approached the jail warden to pass on the complaint, he reportedly raised the alarm resulting in several jail guards arriving on the scene with lathis. The beatings stopped only when the Jail Superintendent himself arrived and intervened.

Most of the 792 Bhutanese people from refugee camps in eastern Nepal detained at three jails - Jalpaiguri, Siliguri and Berhampur - in West Bengal, India, have been held for over two months without charge or trial. Amnesty International continues to be concerned that they are being held in violation of their right to freedom of expression and their right to peaceful assembly and is calling for their immediate and unconditional release, unless they are to be charged immediately with a recognizable criminal offence.

Following appeals to the authorities in India in early May after detainees at Jalpaiguri Jail complaining about inadequate provision of food were beaten by jail guards, conditions at the jail are reported to have improved.
