ALBANIATirana students

It is reported that on 28 February 1997 police officers in Tirana kicked and punched a group of high-school students to prevent them from joining university students taking part in an anti-government protest. Police turned back without the use of force other groups of high-school students seeking to join the protest.

Students in Tirana have boycotted classes at faculties and schools in solidarity with some 80 students in the southern town of Vlora who have been on hunger-strike since 20 February calling for the government's resignation and for the reimbursement of money which many thousands of Albanian citizens have lost in failed pyramid investment schemes (see original EXTRA and previous updates).

On 27 February police reportedly prevented Tirana students from entering a university building to start their own hunger-strike, and two student leaders, one of them named Premton Gogo, were arrested by plainclothes police. The two have reportedly since been released.

Students have also gone on hunger-strike in the southern town of Gjirokastrë and are reported to have claimed that doctors at the town's hospital had refused to treat them.

APPEALS AS OUTLINED IN PREVIOUS FOLLOW-UP, EUR 11/03/97, MAY CONTINUE, adding expressions of concern about reports that on 28 February police punched and kicked some high-school students in Tirana who were attempting to exercise, non-violently, their right to peaceful protest.
