SAUDI ARABIA

Hadi Sa'eed Al-Muteef (m), Saudi Arabian national, aged 31
Suliamon Olyfemi (m), Nigerian national, aged about 28
Siti Zainab Binti Duhri Rupa (f), Indonesian national Ahmed al-Bahrani (m), Saudi Arabian
An unknown number of others under sentence of death

Hadi Sa'eed Al-Muteef's health has improved, and he has been released from King Khaled Hospital in Najran, in the Western Province of Saudi Arabia. He has been returned to prison, but is no longer believed to be held in solitary confinement.

Amnesty International has received encouraging news from the Saudi Arabian Human Rights Commission (HRC) about Hadi Sa'eed Al-Muteef's case. In response to an appeal from a member of the UA network, the President of the HRC wrote a letter, dated 13 January 2007, stating that the death sentence against Hadi Sa'eed Al-Muteef had been commuted to a prison term, and that he is being considered for a total pardon. The letter did not specify when his death sentence was commuted, or the length of the prison term imposed on him. Amnesty International believes that Hadi Sa'eed Al-Muteef is a prisoner of conscience, detained solely for exercising his right to peaceful freedom of expression, and calls for his immediate and unconditional release.

The President of the HRC also indicated in his letter that the cases of Nigerian national Suliamon Olyfemi and Indonesian national Siti Zainab Binti Duhri Rupa, who may be facing imminent execution, were being raised with the relevant Saudi Arabian authorities. The letter made no reference to the case of Saudi Arabian national Ahmed al-Bahrani, who is also at risk of imminent execution.

Hadi Sa'eed Al-Muteef was arrested in 1994 and sentenced to death in 1997 on a vague charge relating to comments he made that were deemed to be contrary to Shar'ia. Suliamon Olyfemi was reportedly sentenced to death in connection with the murder of a policeman in Jeddah in 2002. Siti Zainab Binti Duhri Rupa was arrested in connection with murder in September 1999. She is said to suffer from a mental illness and "confessed" to the murder during police interrogation. Ahmad al-Bahrani was sentenced to death for murder and was reportedly pardoned in exchange for payment of diya (financial compensation). However he is said to be unable to pay the first instalment of the diya and is therefore at risk of imminent execution.
