TUNISIA Khémais KSILA

Khémais Ksila was released on 22 September 1999, having served two years of his three-year prison sentence.

The following day he was taken to the police station and asked to sign a declaration promising not to issue further communiqués or statements on the human rights situation in Tunisia. He refused to do this and was released after a couple of hours.

Khémais Ksila, vice-president of the Ligue Tunisienne des Droits de l'Homme (LTDH), Tunisian Human Rights League, was sentenced to three years' imprisonment in February 1998, on charges of "outrage to public order, spreading false information and inciting citizens to break the law". He had been in prison since his arrest in September 1997.
