

PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA: HUMAN RIGHTS SITUATION AT NEW LOW

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL:
SUBMISSION TO THE 45TH SESSION OF THE UPR WORKING GROUP, JANUARY-FEBRUARY 2024

SUMMARY

This submission was prepared for the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) of the People's Republic of China (China) in January-February 2024. In it, Amnesty International evaluates the implementation of recommendations made to China in its previous UPR, including in relation to the use of the death penalty, ethnic minorities, discrimination and ratification of international treaties.

It also assesses the national human rights framework with regard to the ratification of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), cooperation with the UN human rights mechanisms, crimes against humanity in the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region (Xinjiang) and the use of national security and sedition charges in the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (Hong Kong).

With regard to the human rights situation on the ground, Amnesty International raises concern about human rights defenders, freedom of expression, arbitrary detention, torture and other ill-treatment and unfair trial, and extraterritorial obligations. It ends with a set of recommendations to China which, if implemented, would contribute to improving the human rights situation.

Amnesty International is a global movement of more than 10 million people who campaign for a world where human rights are enjoyed by all.

Our vision is for every person to enjoy all the rights enshrined in the universal declaration of human rights and other international human rights standards.

We are independent of any government, political ideology, economic interest or religion and are funded mainly by our membership and public donations.

FOLLOW UP TO THE PREVIOUS REVIEW

1. In its third UPR in 2018, the government of China received 346 recommendations from 137 states, of which it supported 284.¹ While the Chinese authorities have made progress on some of the supported recommendations, they have failed to make progress on others, and on others have even regressed.

The death penalty

2. China did not support any recommendations regarding the use of the death penalty. The government continues to classify statistics for executions and death sentences as “state secrets”, but thousands of people are believed to have been executed each year since the last review.² The death penalty remains applicable for 46 offences, including non-lethal offences that do not meet the threshold of “most serious crimes” under international law and standards. Since July 2021, court documents, including death penalty sentences, have been selectively removed from an online database run by the Supreme People’s Court. This further undermines the few steps undertaken in recent years towards improving transparency.³

Discrimination

3. Despite supporting, and reporting on the implementation of, recommendations related to legislating against and combating discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity,⁴ China still lacks a comprehensive anti-discrimination law that protects people with different sexual orientations and gender identities.
4. Large-scale censorship during the review period shut down numerous online lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex (LGBTI) groups and social media accounts and has undermined LGBTI activism both online and offline.
5. Despite China’s support for a recommendation to prevent discrimination against transgender people,⁵ there continues to be a serious lack of information for transgender people on how to access gender-affirming treatment, as well as stringent eligibility criteria for gender-affirming surgeries. Transgender people face widespread stigma and discrimination from society, in particular family members. These barriers mean that they have resorted to high-risk behaviours such as self-medication and some have attempted to perform surgery on themselves. Doctors often require transgender people to have familial consent before accessing non-surgical gender-affirming treatments.⁶

Ratifications of international treaties

6. China signed the ICCPR in 1998 and has supported recommendations on “considering” ratification. However, China only noted recommendations on ratification and has demonstrated no significant progress or willingness towards taking that step in practice.⁷
7. Regrettably, China has not supported recommendations in the previous reviews to ratify the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance.⁸ Ratification of this important treaty would be an important first step in demonstrating the government’s commitment to ensuring that no one is subjected to this crime in China.

Cooperation with the UN human rights mechanisms

8. In all previous reviews, China has supported recommendations to step up cooperation with UN human rights mechanisms but has not improved cooperation with the UN Special Procedures.⁹ To date, the government has yet to provide the “full and unfettered” access requested for the UN or facilitate independent investigation of crimes under international law and other human rights violations in the country, including Xinjiang.¹⁰

THE NATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS FRAMEWORK

National security and sedition charges in Hong Kong

9. On 30 June 2020, the National People’s Congress Standing Committee (NPCSC) issued legislation directly adding the National Security Law (NSL) to Annex III of the Hong Kong Basic Law and announcing that the law would be directly promulgated by the Hong Kong government without any formal, meaningful public or other local consultation.
10. Since 2020, authorities have rapidly expanded the national security legal regime, further extending the application of the overly broad definition of “endangering national security” to disproportionately restrict human rights in the city and overseas. The NSL seriously threatens fair trial rights by granting law enforcement extensive investigatory powers, undermining the presumption of innocence of suspects, weakening safeguards in existing laws and depriving local courts of the power to review the compatibility of the NSL with human rights safeguards in international and local laws.¹¹ The UN Human Rights Committee has recommended an immediate suspension and subsequent repeal of the National Security Law.¹²
11. Hong Kong authorities used vague national security and sedition charges – including but not limited to the NSL - to effectively remove all political opposition, undermine long established means of scrutinizing, critiquing, and trying to influence government actions, and criminalize various kinds of expression, association and advocacy. Journalists, lawyers, and human rights defenders have been arrested and imprisoned because of their peaceful activism.¹³ Human rights activist Chow Hang-tung and two other leaders of the now disbanded Hong Kong Alliance in Support of Patriotic Democratic Movements of China were charged with “inciting subversion”.¹⁴ Police used the Tiananmen commemoration vigil and other peaceful activism as evidence of the three “endangering national security”.¹⁵

THE HUMAN RIGHTS SITUATION ON THE GROUND

Human rights defenders (HRDs)

12. Severe crackdowns on HRDs have continued since the last review. The authorities arrested, detained and imprisoned many HRDs for lengthy periods under unjustifiable, broadly defined and vaguely worded charges. HRDs were imprisoned for merely organizing private gatherings. Legal scholar Xu Zhiyong and human rights lawyer Ding Jiayi were sentenced to 14 and 12 years in prison respectively by a court in Shandong province in April 2023 after taking part in an informal gathering held in Xiamen, a city on China’s southeast coast, in December 2019, in which they discussed the civil society situation and current affairs in China.¹⁶
13. Amnesty International has documented numerous cases since 2018 in which the Chinese authorities arbitrarily restricted the right to freedom of movement and travel of HRDs and dissidents. These restrictions include rejecting passport applications citing national security reasons, stopping individuals at airports, and banning individuals from buying train tickets. Writer and activist Guo Feixiong was barred from leaving the country to visit his critically ill wife in 2022.¹⁷ He was charged for “inciting subversion” two days after the death of his wife and subsequently sentenced to eight year’s imprisonment in May 2023 for “publishing seditious articles”.
14. Authorities have continued to monitor, harass and intimidate individuals after their release and restricted their freedom of movement. They also harass HRD’s relatives. Pu Wenqing, mother of jailed human rights defender Huang Qi, is in her late eighties and has been subjected to strict surveillance. Authorities have prevented her from hiring lawyers and stopped her campaigning for her son’s release.¹⁸

Ethnic minorities and religious groups

15. China regrettably only noted most of the recommendations on ethnic minorities in Tibet and Xinjiang.¹⁹ Ethnic Tibetans continue to face discrimination and restrictions on their rights to freedom of religion and belief, expression, association, and peaceful assembly. Religious leaders and practitioners, including those belonging to house churches, Uyghur imams, Tibetan Buddhist monks and Falun Gong members, were among those subjected to arbitrary arrest and detention during the review period.²⁰ (See paragraphs 26 below)
16. Evidence collected by Amnesty International shows that the Chinese government has committed at least the crimes against humanity of imprisonment, torture and persecution against Uyghurs, Kazakhs, and other predominantly Muslim ethnic minorities. China has intensified its campaign of mass internment, intrusive surveillance, political indoctrination and forced cultural assimilation in Xinjiang.²¹
17. Thousands of Uyghur children, whose parents were detained in Xinjiang or living overseas, were forcibly taken to “orphan camps” or boarding schools where they have reportedly not been allowed to speak in their mother tongue.²²
18. In September 2020, police in northern China’s Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region arrested at least 23 individuals for participating in, or sharing information about, peaceful protests against a “bilingual education policy” in the region.

Arbitrary detention, torture and other ill-treatment, and unfair trial

19. Often without access to family and to lawyers of their choosing, as well as effective fair trial mechanisms, many detainees, especially HRDs, were reportedly subjected to torture and other ill-treatment while in detention.²³
20. Individuals who spoke out about torture and ill-treatment in detention faced state reprisals. Feminist and labour rights activist Li Qiaochu was charged for “inciting subversion” after she spoke out about police subjecting her and Xu Zhiyong to ill-treatment during detention.²⁴ Rights lawyer Chang Weiping was sentenced to three years and six months’ imprisonment for speaking out about the torture and other ill-treatment he said he faced while in detention.²⁵
21. The authorities continue to use Residential Surveillance at a Designated Location, a measure that enables investigators to hold individuals outside the formal detention system for periods up to six months without access to legal counsel of their choice or to their families, and places suspects at risk of torture and other ill-treatment.
22. Detainees with deteriorating health are often denied or unable to access adequate medical treatment. Zhanargul Zhumatai, an ethnic Kazakh journalist and artist, was taken away from her mother’s house in Urumqi, Xinjiang, on 10 February 2023. The state security police detained her after she communicated with people abroad and spoke out for the land rights of Kazakh herding communities. Zhumatai had previously been detained in an internment camp for over two years, where she developed some heart problems reportedly due to lack of medical care.²⁶
23. Citizen journalist Zhang Zhan was sentenced to four years’ imprisonment for reporting on the Covid-19 pandemic in Wuhan. In June 2020, Zhang began a hunger strike in protest at her detention. Prior to the trial, authorities force-fed her and restrained her for days at a time to prevent her from removing a feeding tube. They also forced Zhang to wear shackles and hand restraints 24 hours a day for more than three months as punishment for her hunger strike.²⁷
24. Immigration detention ordered by administrative authorities is widely used as an immigration control measure in Hong Kong. The Immigration Ordinance is used by the government to justify the detention of “illegal immigrants” in effect indefinitely and without the ability to challenge the reasons for their detention, while their application to protect them against deportation because of a risk of refoulement (so-called non-refoulement or “torture-protection” claims) is reviewed, or pending removal if their claim was denied.²⁸ Amendments to Hong Kong’s

Immigration Ordinance in 2021 made it easier for the government to detain migrants for extended periods of time and substantially reduced domestic judicial oversight on how to determine whether the length of detention is justifiable under local standards.²⁹

Freedom of expression

25. Since 2018, the government has continued to stifle criticism of its laws, policies, and practices as well as discussion of topics considered sensitive, including through increasingly pervasive online censorship. Activists, journalists and HRDs who express critical opinions or report on topics deemed sensitive by the government, face harassment, intimidation, detention, and criminal sentences.
26. Large-scale peaceful protests against Covid-19 restrictions and censorship, referred to as the “A4 protests”, took place across China following a fatal apartment fire in Urumqi in November 2022. Large numbers of people were detained for participating. Videos circulated online showed police beating protesters during arrests.³⁰ Kamile Wayit, a Uyghur student studying in Henan, was taken away by the police on 12 December 2022. In November she had posted a video online about these protests but deleted it shortly after her father received a warning call from the police.³¹

Extraterritorial obligations

27. The China Chamber of Commerce of Metals Minerals and & Chemicals Importers & Exporters, a state sanctioned industry organization, have released two sets of guidelines calling on Chinese mining companies to observe international business and human rights standards and to conduct human rights due diligence in line with the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.³² However, Amnesty International’s research raises serious concerns about human rights abuses linked to Chinese companies abroad. For example, labour practices of Chinese mining companies on Dinagat Island in the Philippines and the labour-hire companies through which they employ their workforces raise serious questions about the efficacy of such voluntary guidelines in tackling human rights abuses linked to the operations of Chinese mining companies.³³

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR ACTION BY THE STATE UNDER REVIEW

Amnesty International calls on the government of China to:

Ratification of international treaties

29. Ratify the ICCPR without further delay and, as previously recommended, ratify the Convention on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance and the Second Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights aiming at the abolition of the death penalty.³⁴

The death penalty

30. As previously recommended,³⁵ increase transparency on the use of the death penalty, including by publishing full national statistics on death sentences and executions, fully disaggregated by crime, region, and characteristics of the prisoners, including gender, ethnic group, and income.
31. As previously recommended,³⁶ immediately establish a moratorium on executions and commute all existing death sentences with a view to the full abolition of the death penalty in national legislation.

Discrimination

32. Ensure that LGBTI people including transgender and gender diverse people have access, on an equal basis, to quality healthcare services across China.
33. Without further delay, implement previously supported recommendations to adopt comprehensive anti-discrimination legislation relating to sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression and sex characteristics, including a mandate for law enforcement and the judicial system to combat such discrimination and investigate allegations of discrimination against LGBTI people.

Ethnic minorities and religious groups

34. Without further delay and with technical assistance from the OHCHR and other relevant international organizations, set up procedures to provide information at the request of relatives or legal representatives at home or abroad on the status and whereabouts of relatives of the Uyghur community abroad who were detained by the authorities and are believed to be held in camps or prison facilities in Xinjiang.
35. Immediately allow UN human rights experts, as well as independent observers, including human rights investigators and journalists, unfettered access to the country, including to internment camps and prisons in Xinjiang and Tibet.
36. As previously recommended, immediately release all persons held in internment camps or other detention facilities – including prisons – in Xinjiang, unless there is sufficient credible and admissible evidence that they have committed an internationally recognizable offence, are transferred to recognized detention facilities, and are granted a fair trial in line with international standards.

Human rights defenders

37. Immediately stop the harassment, arbitrary detention, torture and other ill-treatment, criminal prosecution, imprisonment and enforced disappearance of those who act to defend and promote human rights.
38. Respect, protect and fulfil the rights to freedom of expression, peaceful assembly and association, including by ensuring a safe and enabling environment in which media outlets, journalists, civil society organizations and human rights defenders are effectively protected and can work safely without fear of reprisal.

Freedom of expression

39. Remove restrictions on freedom of expression and press freedom, including on the Internet, that are not in accordance with international law

Arbitrary detention, torture and other ill-treatment, and unfair trial

40. Ensure that no one is subjected to arbitrary detention, enforced disappearance, or torture or other ill-treatment, and shut down places of unlawful detention, including “vocational training”, “transformation-through-education”, “de-extremification” centres and internment camps.
41. Guarantee the rights of detainees to fair trial, including the right to be held in a recognized place of detention, prompt notification of family following arrest, and timely access to legal counsel, in line with international law and standards.
42. Cease the use of indefinite detention in the context of immigration, and establish in law limits on detention in accordance with international guidelines.
43. Protect migrants from arbitrary and indefinite detention by ensuring that detention is used for the shortest time possible to achieve a legitimate and legal aim, and anyone detained has the ability to effectively challenge the reasons and duration for their detention through judicial review.

National security

44. Implement the recommendations of the UN Human Rights Committee to take steps to repeal the Hong Kong National Security Law and sedition provisions of the Crimes Ordinance in Hong Kong.

Extraterritorial obligations

45. Amend relevant laws and regulations to require all Chinese companies to respect human rights throughout their business operations and value chains, regardless of where they operate, and require Chinese companies, and companies operating in China, to conduct robust and transparent human rights due diligence in line with the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.
46. Ensure that strong human rights safeguards are integrated into the policies and management of all development projects, including those funded through international financial institutions.
47. Ensure comprehensive human rights safeguards and due diligence requirements are integrated into the policies and management of financial institutions of which China is an investor.
