Refoulement / Fear of torture

20 January 1998

DJIBOUTI / ETHIOPIA Ali Omar (also known as Ibrahim Ali Osman), refugee community leader, former university student
Sheikh Mussa Hassan Abdi (also known as Souala), Islamic religious leader, former political prisoner in Ethiopia
Mourad Ahmed (also known as Mustafa Salih), farmer
Mohamed Yusuf
Hassan Mohamed, farmer, disabled
Abdulwasi Ali

The six Ethiopians named above were arrested by police in Djibouti town on 14 January 1998 and handed over to the Ethiopian authorities on 19 January. Their whereabouts in detention in Ethiopia are not known. The six, who include a recognized refugee and three asylum-seekers, may now be facing torture and detention for an indefinite period without charge or trial in Ethiopia, and may be prisoners of conscience.

Ali Omar was a recognised refugee and three others - Sheikh Mussa Hassan Abdi, Mourad Ahmed and Mohamed Yusuf - had applied for refugee status and were known to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in Djibouti. The status of the other two is not known. All six are members of the Oromo ethnic group. The forced return of refugees and asylum-seekers contravenes the international and regional refugee treaties which Djibouti has signed.

Amnesty International fears that some more Oromo refugees in Djibouti may have already been arrested or even returned to Ethiopia, as police or security officers in Djibouti town were reportedly searching for other Oromos.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

These arrests are allegedly part of a security agreement between Djibouti and Ethiopia to return each other's particular "wanted" opponents and refugees, despite both countries' ratification of international and regional refugee treaties. In 1996 Djibouti handed over four ethnic Somali opponents to Ethiopia (who were tortured and are still detained) and an Afar opponent (now released), and in 1997 Ethiopia handed over 14 Afar opponents to Djibouti (still detained under judicial investigation). The six Oromos named above were apparently suspected of involvement with the Oromo Liberation Front (OLF), which has been in armed opposition since it left the Ethiopian coalition government in 1992.

In Ethiopia there is a pattern of widespread detentions, torture, "disappearances" and extrajudicial executions of suspected OLF supporters.

RECOMMENDED ACTION: Please send telegrams/faxes/express/airmail letters:

A. Appeals to the ETHIOPIAN authorities, in English or your own language:

- expressing concern that the above-named are at risk of torture or ill-treatment while detained in Ethiopia;
- calling on the Ethiopian authorities to state where they are held, provide assurances that they are being treated humanely, and allow them immediate access to their families and lawyers;
- calling for them to be brought before a judge without delay, and either charged with recognizable criminal offences and given a fair and prompt trial in accordance with international standards, or else released.
