Death threats/Fear for Safety/ possibleextrajudicial

On 14 June 1999 John Alejandro Linares Peña was allegedly extrajudicially executed by members of the Policía Metropolitana (Metropolitan Police) in Caracas. Amnesty International fears for the safety of his family and friends, who have received death threats from the Metropolitan Police.

Members of the Metropolitan Police arrived at the home of the Linares Peña family on 14 June 1999. John Alejandro Linares Peña apparently started running when he saw the police. He was chased and gave himself up. Police arrested him but a member of the Metropolitan Police reportedly shot John Linares in the stomach. He was taken away in a car by the police, reportedly wounded but still alive. However, his body was later found in the Hospital Periférico de Catia with six bullet wounds.

Andrés Eloy Linares Peña, John's brother, received a death threat after he pleaded with the police not to use their firearms and pointed out that John was unarmed. Their sister, 13-year-old Adriana Linares Peña, was also present.

On 16 July 1999, as Andrés Eloy Linares, Omar León Hernández and six other neighbours were painting the entrance of their apartment block, they were searched by several members of the police force, who told them: "si se mueven los matamos" ("if you move, you are dead").

A complaint about the killing has been filed with the Policía Técnica Judicial (Criminal Investigation Police). However, no investigation has been initiated into the killing, or the death threats, because a public attorney (fiscal) has not been assigned to the case. Amnesty International is calling for a full and independent investigation into the circumstances and cause of John Linares's death.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

During 1998 Amnesty International was told about dozens of people killed by the security forces in circumstances suggesting excessive use of force or, in some cases, extrajudicial execution (see UA 221/98, AMR 53/07/98, 14 August 1998). These incidents are rarely fully investigated and in very few cases have those responsible been brought to justice.

In addition, Amnesty International has received reports of human rights defenders and community activists being threatened and harassed.

Since President Hugo Chávez Frías took office in February, Amnesty International has received several reports of torture and ill-treatment.
