Publication of a new summary of human rights concerns

(AI INDEX: EUR 39/06/98)

On the anniversary of the suspension of human rights monitoring by the Council of Europe, serious human rights violations persist in Romania. Within the context of the forthcoming meeting of the Council of Europe's Monitoring Committee this month -- aimed among other things at reviewing Romania's compliance with a set of specific recommendations -- Amnesty International is publishing a new report, Romania: A Summary of Human Rights Concerns.

The report contains a general background about the lack of progress in the protection of some fundamental human rights guaranteed by the Constitution of Romania, international treaties and domestic law, and explores:

- the failure of legislative reforms to safeguard fundamental rights and freedoms;
- the imprisonment of prisoners of conscience, and
- the authorities' failure to promptly and impartially investigate cases torture and ill-treatment by law enforcement officers -- including incidents of racist violence against Romani communities.

The report also includes extensive recommendations concerning legislative reforms and investigations into human rights violations.
