

URGENT ACTION

ACTIVIST THREATENED

An academic who ran for parliament has received death threats, days after another activist was abducted and killed. Rafael Cáceres had spoken out against the coup that installed a new government in Honduras in June.

Rafael Cáceres is the Deputy Director of the School of Fine Arts (Escuela de Bellas Artes) in the capital, Tegucigalpa. He is an activist and has been outspoken against the coup of 28 June, which ousted President Manuel Zelaya. He had run for a seat in congress for one of the country's several opposition parties, the Partido Unificación Democrática (Democratic Unification Party).

He has now received a string of mobile phone text messages, all from the same mobile phone number. He received the first on 11 July, which said, "You are on the list, dog." (Estas en la lista, perro) The next, which came on 19 October, at 10pm, said, "You are also on the list of teachers who we will kill." (Vos tambien estas en la lista de los profesores que vamos a quebrar.) On 20 December he received two threats in quick succession, which indicated knowledge of his daily routine. The first, sent at noon, said, "We are already close to you" and the second, sent three minutes later, said, "We will be waiting for you in El Sitio this Thursday." (Te esperamos por el sitio el jueves) Rafael Cáceres has to pass through the neighbourhood of El Sitio every day to go to and from work. On 22 December he reported the threats and provided the details including the telephone number they had come from, to the police National Department of Criminal Investigation (Dirección Nacional de Investigación Criminal). On 24 December he received a message saying, "We are waiting for you these days." (Te esperamos estos días). He received the latest threat on 30 December at 8.20 pm, which read: "we will be waiting for you these days we have to complete our mission." (Te estaremos esperando estos días tenemos que cumplir la misión).

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

The democratically elected president of Honduras, José Manuel Zelaya Rosales, was deposed on 28 June by a military-backed group of politicians led by the head of Congress, Roberto Micheletti. There has been widespread unrest in the country since then, with the police and army clashing frequently with protestors. According to local sources, at least 10 people have died in unclear circumstances since 28 June. Human rights defenders have come under increasing pressure since the coup. Human rights activist Walter Tróchez was killed in a drive-by shooting on 13 December while walking home through the centre of Tegucigalpa. He was taken to hospital but later died. He may have been targeted because of his human rights work.

Walter Tróchez told Amnesty International on 11 December that he had escaped a kidnapping attempt a week earlier, in which he had undergone several hours of beatings and threats by masked men. They had questioned him about people opposed to the authorities installed by the coup.

For further information see the press statement calling for an investigation into the kidnap and murder of Walter Tróchez:
