COLOMBIAN Nidia Correa Velásquez (f)

Members of the displaced community in Tulúa, Valle del Cauca Department

Amnesty International remains seriously concerned for the safety of the forcibly displaced community of Tulúa, Valle del Cauca Department, following the appearance of a death list naming 300 people, including community and social leaders who have been declared paramilitary targets.

On 13 and 14 August, a death list signed by the Bloque Calima, Calima Block, of the paramilitary group Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia (AUC), United Self-Defence Forces of Colombia, was circulated in the municipality of Tulúa. Copies of this list were fixed to very visible places in the municipality, such as shops and bus stations. The list called for "Social Cleansing", Limpieza Social, and "for a Tulúa without parasites", Por una Tulúa sin parásitos. Next to the women's names included in the list was written, "for being bitches", por perras.

These threats raise grave concerns of an imminent incursion of army-backed paramilitaries into the municipality. The presence of army-backed paramilitaries has reportedly increased in the last few days. According to information received, in the neighbouring municipality of Bugalagrande four pick-up trucks were seen transporting 200 heavily armed men wearing the distinctive arm-bands of the AUC.

Between 14 and 16 August eight people named on the list were killed, and others on the list had written death threats pushed under the doors of their homes.

According to local sources, the local authorities have been informed about the situation but to date no effective action to protect the civilian population has been taken. Local authorities allegedly told members of the community that there was nothing left to do but pray.

There is no further information on the whereabouts of Nidia Correa Velásquez, abducted on 16 May.
