Fear for safety/Death Threats

03 October 2006

BANGLADESH

Professor Hasan Azizul Huq (m)
His family

---

On 24 August, death threats were made against Hasan Azizul Huq, a retired Professor from Rajshahi University. Amnesty International is concerned for his safety and that of his family, who are at risk of further threats and harassment following his criticism of religious based politics in Bangladesh.

Professor Hasan Azizul Huq was threatened by a group allegedly linked to the Bangladesh Islami Chhatrashibir, the student wing of the political party, Jamaat-e-Islami. The threat followed a seminar in the city of Rajshahi on 21 August 2006 entitled "secularism, the state and education" where Professor Huq spoke in defence of secularism and the separation of religion from politics. The day after the seminar, an article in a pro-Jamaat-e-Islami newspaper, Naya Diganta (New Horizon) vilified Professor Huq's speech as an attack against Islam. Copies of the newspaper article were then widely distributed amongst students.

On 24 August, a group calling themselves Shacheton Chhatrasangram Parishad (Protesting Students' organization) staged a rally where several speakers declared Professor Huq as "an enemy of Islam" and threatened him with death. The group is alleged to be an extension of the above-mentioned Bangladesh Islami Chhatrashibir. The threats have been followed by anonymous telephone calls to Professor Huq's residence warning him that he would be killed.

Professor Hasan Azizul Huq has notified the police of the threat against him and his family, but so far they have not been provided with any protection and those known to have issued the death threats have yet to be brought to justice.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

Writers, journalists and academicians expressing secular views and advocating the separation of religion from politics are at risk of attack from Islamist groups. Amnesty International is aware of several such cases in Rajshahi where academicians have been the targets of attacks. At least two professors of Rajshahi University known for their secular views have been attacked and killed in recent years. The assailants are believed to be linked to Islamist groups. No one has been brought to justice for these attacks.
