

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL

Survey on Children and Young People's Experiences on Social Media

Introduction

Would you like to make the internet and social media platforms better? With your help Amnesty International will be better positioned to make the internet and social media platforms a safer more fun place. Can you spend 15-30 minutes of your time filling in a survey to help shape Amnesty's research into children and young people's experiences of social media? We'd love to hear from you if you are aged between 13 and 24 or if you're a parent/guardian and would like to tell us about your child's experiences. Please do not complete this survey yourself if you are younger than 13.

We would like to ask questions about your experiences on social media. Some of the questions may bring up unpleasant memories if you've experienced anything negative online. We encourage you to take a break if you need to. You can also end the survey early and let us know how why you've done so, if you wish to share why. We've included a list of local and international organizations here that can provide support if this survey brings up any difficult memories or feelings:

- Befrienders (<https://www.befrienders.org/>)
- I'm Alive (<https://www.imalive.org/>)
- List of national helplines and organizations in Staying Resilient While Trying to Save the World (Volume 2): A Well-Being Workbook for Youth Activists (page 100) (<https://www.amnesty.org/en/documents/act10/3231/2020/en/>)

Consent Disclaimer

Consent disclaimer

How we work:

Often, our work starts with people like you sharing a story and information with us. Often this is done through interviewing people, but today we'd like to ask some questions through a survey. When you share your story with Amnesty International, we ask you for your consent.

This means you can decide:

- whether or not you want to give us information and what you tell us.
- whether you want to answer all our questions. (You might not want to answer all of the questions we ask you).
- to stop sharing your story at any time, or to take a break from it.

The information you give us is used to campaign to stop human abuses around the world, to hold those who commit them to account and to get redress for victims and their loved ones.

But we will not use or take any action on what you tell us without your agreement.

How we use your information:

Amnesty may use your information for a range of purposes, including campaigning; publishing reports; in the media (including social media); in activism and human rights education materials; to conduct advocacy meetings at the local, national and/or international level, and for the purpose of attracting new members and raising donations for our work.

If you give Amnesty consent to use your information publicly it means we can then use this information in all our core activities.

This means we might:

- tell journalists about your story and they might publish it or parts of it in the media.
- ask our members and supporters to take action on the story or case you have told us about. This could be by writing letters to governments and holding public demonstrations.
- tell the United Nations about your case and ask them to investigate it.
- talk to governments about the case; this includes your own government and the governments of other countries.
- publish your story in printed materials and on the internet; these stories can be seen by people for many years. We will seek to attract new paying members and raise money to enable us to do our work.

People around the world may learn about what happened to you and your family. Government officials, members of your community, and your family and friends could all read or hear about you in reports or on the internet.

But you can decide:

- whether or not you allow us to share your story.
- whether or not we can use your real name or other details that can identify you.

We will always do our best to act on a human rights issue that you tell us about, but we do not guarantee that we will be able to use the information you give us. However, if at a later stage we want to intensify our work on your case or story to get justice and have the impact desired, we will contact you and discuss this with you and get your agreement before doing so.

How we store your information

The information you share with us will be stored in our information systems and shared confidentially with Amnesty International colleagues around the world when needed. This information will be held, potentially indefinitely, in our internal research archive. You can change your mind about the permission you have given us to use what you have told us at any time.

Please get in touch with us at any time at the address and email address below.

Amnesty International, International Secretariat Peter Benenson House, 1 Easton Street, London WC1X 0DW, United Kingdom. Tel: +44 20 7413 5500

Email: CYDSurvey@amnesty.org

If you are happy to proceed with the survey, please click to the next page. We will ask again at the end of the survey once you have completed it, if you are happy to share your information with Amnesty International and if you are happy, then whether you allow us to share your story publicly and if you would like us to use or not your real name or other details that identify you.

Your opinion

Is there anything you would like to change about these platforms?

Is there anything your child would like to change about these platforms?

If you dream of a world where the social media you use is respectful, empowering and a really great thing in your life, what does it look like?

If your child dreams of a world where the social media she/he/they use(s) are respectful, empowering and a really great thing in their life, what does it look like?

Consent and personal information

* Now you have filled in the survey, are you happy for Amnesty to use your answers in our research?

This may mean writing about your story and using your answers in a report, press release, blog or social media post (include picture examples of each and links). If you (or the child on whose behalf you've been completing this survey) are under 18, we will automatically change your name and any identifying parts of your story and answers.

If you are over 18, you can choose for us to use your story, either with your name or without your name and identifying parts of your story changed. If you give us your consent to publish your name, we will always ask you again if you are happy for your name to be published along with any of your statements before doing so (please enter your email address below). Alternatively, you can say no and we will hold the information you have given us internally and not share it with anyone.

If you are over 18 and are happy for us to use your name, please write it here:

If you are happy for us to use your story and words, would you be willing to speak a bit more about your experiences to someone from Amnesty? If so, please put your email address in the box below so that we can contact you to follow up.

We reserve the right to break confidentiality if we believe you may be at immediate risk of harm, in which case we may have to share information with the person at Amnesty in charge of child protection.
