BEATEN UP FOR BEING IN LOVE

COSTAS GREECE

WRITE FOR RIGHTS

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL

In August 2014, Costas and his partner, who is a refugee, were badly beaten up by thugs in a homophobic and racist attack in central Athens. No suspects were identified, let alone punished. Across Greece, the authorities are repeatedly failing to tackle rising violence motivated by hatred. And they're treating same-sex couples as second-class citizens.

Get the Greek government to order a full investigation into this hate crime and make sure Costas and his partner get the compensation they deserve.
